Run 2080 – Alias Stands In @ Whitfords Nodes

Preamble:

As an act of pure kindness, I offered to help Alias set the run as he was kind enough to step in and help Fitzall at a time when he had other priorities. Seeming I had the time, I researched Google Maps and found the paths and roads around the run location and mapped out what I considered a good run route. When Alias arrived, I offered the map and it was agreed the planned route looked fine. It was at this point your most humble GM whilst retrieving chalk for Alias from the boot of my car managed to lock the dog's lead and car key into the boot. Not to be deterred, Alias came up with a cunning plan, he would start marking the trail to the North and I would start marking the trail to the south and I could get the RAC out to open up my car when we had finished setting.. I was ten minutes into my side of the marking when Alias's map reading skills came to the fore in the form of a phone call. "Tampax, the path you have on the map does not exist and I have to come back past the bucket, so I have rubbed out all the trail. We need to reset or else, I will get the Shit Award." So, I back tracked on the trail I had marked and met the hare. After pointing out the minor detail that if he had headed another fifty metres north, he would have found the path that goes from the beach to Ern Halliday Camp (a site we had been to on previous occasions). At this point, Alias decided to wing it and set a new trail.

I headed back to the bucket to find Bloo and Elvis had arrived and a figure who from a distance seemed somewhat familiar. Upon getting closer the figure turned out to be Hog. I called the RAC to come and unlock my car and started greeting fellow Hashmen as they arrived. Some twenty minutes later the RAC arrived and had my car unlocked in another three minutes, enabling me to get rags, run sheet and various other Hash related items from the boot. As it was so easy for an honest person to get into the car without breaking anything, I was left wondering how quickly could someone with ill intent could get in.

One of the topics of discussion before the run was the absence of the elderly gent from Warwick. Fitzall contacted your esteemed GM on Tuesday morning and apologised for his absence at the run and explained that whoever had torched his house over Easter had come back and had another go. So he was unfortunately otherwise occupied.

As Bloo sounded a three-minute warning Alias returned from setting the run, swelling the numbers for the night to 3. At 6:30 the hare was called to give instructions. "You are on chalk the on is up towards Marmion Ave and if you want to push it out a bit you can come back via the hill."

The Run:

Given the short notice and the Hare's limited map reading skills, the trail headed in a westerly direction into the bowels of Hillarys. The trail kept the pack together for the most part, with ample checks and false trails thrown in for good measure. The trail eventually came back across Marmion Ave where most of the runners took the short way home.

Orig seemed to be missing in action and this was a concern to me as he had taken Duke with him for a run. Nobody was sure if he had gotten lost or been run over or if the dog had dived into a rubbish skip looking for food and taken Orig in with him. Just when it was being contemplated whether to send out a search party (to look for Duke), Orig turned up telling anyone that would listen that he had decided to come back home the long way.

The Rundown:

Despite the usual amount of warnings, splash was disorganised and not ready, before the start of the circle. This led to the start being delayed whilst the usual culprits got their act together and causing angst for Blank as he would miss something on TV.

Finally, after getting the circle underway the GM was able to solicit options and comments on the run.

Hog thought it was a fantastic run and offered 7.5

Narau proffered that it was a very good run, well marked with plenty of this and that and likewise gave it 7.5

The VM decided it was quite good and gave the run an 8 (obviously better than any run he had set)

The GM thought long and hard and considering Alias stepped in to help Fitz out of a tight spot at short notice and despite his lack of map reading ability scored the run at 7.7

Prick Of The Week

The VM informed the circle he had three contenders:

Joystick for constantly calling the VM a Dickhead

Hog for attending the run and ignoring Blank

Diesel for some reason best known only to Blank.

The recipient of the phalanx this week was Diesel

General business:

On 16th January Diesel volunteered to be Social Sec and over the past ten weeks has been too busy to decide on any dates, despite promises to come up with a list. At the Committee meeting last Saturday those present with the aid of a calendar spent five minutes deciding on some dates for functions this year. Diesel advised that he had a list but required his Daughter to type it up. Notwithstanding this excuse, Diesel was given a drink. Seeming that there was splash left over and not wanting to see it wasted Joystick was given a drink for giving the GM the shits.

Next week's run will be a $5 night for members. Visitors will need to pay for mash & drinks.
