Run No. 2089 - The Edgewater Experiment

Preamble :

First of all apologies for the lack of a Letter last week but due to the poor turnout and an inability to find Trail there was not a lot to write Home about. No reflection on Woolies as he had done the job; the 5 of us who ventured out simply lost the plot. Mash and the Fellowship were top notch. Thanks Woolies.

If you missed Jennacubbine you missed a ripper Weekend. Mark your Calendar for next year. Well you could if we had a date in mind.

What of Fitzall's Run? The signs were not good as 6 o'clock struck. A couple of hardy souls in attendance and the prospect of a washed-out Trail. At least the numbers picked up as an erstwhile Member in Concorde graced us with a visit. "Too bloody far to ride to Leeming." and Blank was back from his overseas jaunt. Good to see Joystick out of his sickbed. We ended up 12 in all.

The Run / Walk :

Troopers all, the Pack headed off in search of elusive chalk and made a good fist of it as most were out for a creditable 40 minutes.

The Rundown:

Comments on the Run were tailored with a nod to the weather and scores ranged from a 7 to an 8. The GM acknowledged that it had the potential to be a Good Run given better weather.

Prick of the Week :

Blank felt that Bloo deserved the necklace for failing to fulfil his role as Hash Horn. The fact that he himself was a co-blower eluded Blank.

Charges :

Bloo returned the favour by nailing Blank for carrying an Umbrella on the Run.

Alias had a go at Orig. for his misplaced Ipad at Jennacubbine. A search of Orig's car found it stored under the floormat.

Alias charged Diesel for scheduling Jennacubbine in such inclement weather. Turns out that Diesel's Calendar had the date as 2 weeks later. Charge reversed.

The GM got Blank for dobbing.

Visitors / Returnees :

Concorde and Blank had a drink.

General Business :

The GM thanked Stringline and Diesel for all their efforts in making the weekend such a success. According to one invited guest we couldn't have managed without them.

Fitzall reminded everyone about the Hash Lunch on Friday 7 July at the Carine Tavern.
