Run 2133 – Skippy’s Bonfire Night @ Helena Vale

Preamble:

Eventually everyone managed to find the run site, thanks to our beloved RA ringing up anyone who he thought may be on their way and advising that he and Skippy had placed a table at the front gate with a chair with red legs upside down on the table. Apparently, the red chair legs were representing the Bullsbrook horns.

As 6:30 approached, it seemed that the what is now becoming our normal attendance of seven Bullsbrook Hashers, would be the maximum turnout for this evenings event. Skippy briefed the attendees (I will not call 7 Hashers a pack) on the run. There would be bush with flour and road with chalk and beware of the wet concrete during the run. To the delight of Blank, we were also told there would be a drink stop. Rusty (also from Hills Hash), asked if the run was the reverse of the Hills Hash run Skippy had set the previous day, to which the reply was in the affirmative.

The Run

We went bush on flour, through the new subdivision at Helena Valley on chalk. Looking at the roads around the new subdivision, it seems that the car tyre shops around Helena Valley must be happy as the local lads were leaving a fair amount of rubber on the deserted roads. We found a few false trails, traversed the wet concrete, did a fair amount of back tracking to find trail and searching bush to find traces of flour that made up the trail. We eventually came to the drink stop only to realise that Blank was missing. Strangely enough no one seemed to despondent about this trivial matter, nor did anyone offer to go in search of him. Hope turned to despair, when after about ten minutes, we saw a light coming through the bush, followed shortly thereafter by Blank. After the drink stop, it was basically straight back to the bucket. The run lasted just on the hour including the drink stop and waiting for Blank to emerge.

The Run Down:

Soon after Skippy returned to the bucket he rang up the local fire brigade to inform them that there was not an arsonist on the loose and possibly another phone call to NASA to inform them that there was not a volcanic eruption in the Perth foothills and ignore the satellite images. Skippy then (with ample advice from Blank), set one of his pile of dead trees and rubbish alight

Due to the intensity of the heat given off by the fire, we were forced to consume copious amounts of cold beer to keep our body temperature in check.

Eventually it was decided that as the only Bully Hashman present that did not have a job to do was Blank, so he was appointed acting GM.

Skippy and Rusty were called into the circle and various persons were asked to proffer an opinion and score of the run.

Pyro enjoyed the run and appreciated the good effort put in and was pleased Skippy followed the pack, so at least one person knew where we were going. 8.3

Fitzall similarly enjoyed the run new territory, something a bit different. 8.0

Elvis was in a jovial mood and wanted to give the run a top score but had to drop off points because Blank found his way out of the bush. 8.3

Blank declared that as far as he was concerned it was a terrific run and decided a score of 8.0 was justified.
