Run 2147 The Graveyard Run by Orig @ Padbury

Preamble:

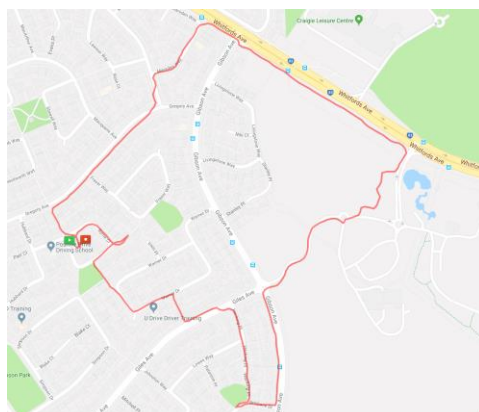

It was Orig's turn and everyone showed up for one of his classic runs. I arrived in ample time before the run was scheduled to start, to give the GM his personal hard copy of the rag. Duke was offered a bag of bones prior to the start of the run, but going on past experience, I decide he could also wait until after the run when the nibbles were allowed., It was good to see that there were 11 souls in attendance, about our average turn out for a run.

At 6:30 the Hare was called for instructions. "You are on chalk on the side of the road. The trail starts across the road in front of the house" So off the pack went as directed.

The Run

Not long after we started Blank started complaining (as per usual) because the trail did not go down the alleyway in front of Orig's house. Instead we headed around the back of his house up the hill and through the park, heading towards Giles Ave. The pack then took a circuitous route to Gibson Ave and into Pinaroo Cemetery. Pity we weren't there last week as we could have stopped and greeted Gwelfhie and Joystick. After emerging from the Cemetery, it was straight back home.

Note written in my note book by an anonymous scribbler. "It was a cold night and Fitz was on his throne." I have no idea what this means or refers to but as the anonymous scribbler considered it important enough to write it the notes, it should be incorporated into the official records.

Distance: 3.37km Duration: 44:33

The Run Down:

In true Hash tradition the GM entreated a precis and score of the run from the selected few.

First was Rooted.	“Very good run, a couple of minor problems with arrows – 8.0”
Second was Fitz.	“Good effort, slightly different territory	- 7.8”
Third was Boydwunder	“Bit different territory, not bad	- 7.0”

After this the GM ruminated and then spoke. “ The on after the check in the cemetery proved to be a bit of a problem, the on home was rather long. Otherwise a good effort – 7.0”

Prick Of The Week:

The GM decided that no one had annoyed him this evening so there was no Phalanx awarded this evening.
