Run 2150 – Alias Stays Home @ Padbury

Preamble:

I have absolutely no idea what happened prior to the run as I arrived at Alias's house at 6:31 and the runners were out in the street starting the run, so I tagged along.

The Run

The weather was fine and the evening crisp. Around the streets of Padbury and Craigie, with a couple of false trails (one at the bottom of the northern suburbs answer to Jacobs Ladder) and a couple of checks thrown in. Most of the pack managed to not spread out to far. It was believed that Fitzall had decided to head back to the bucket early as he was nowhere to be seen. Most of the pack made it home, but Fitzall was missing.

Distance: 2.96Km Duration 46:08

The pack happily settled in for a cool ale, because as tradition has it, it is the Hare's responsibility to find any missing runners. Before Alias became concerned for his welfare, Fitzall returned and questioned why there was no calling on trail? Blank was quick to advise the he (and only he) had been calling all along. This statement from Blank was met with complete derision from every other person in attendance. Needless to say, the "The Dark One" was not happy and stayed dark for some time.

The Run Down:

Opinions were sought and offered from the following:

1. Woolies - "1st real walk I have had all month, I will give it an 8"
2. Rooted - "No concern for the elderly blokes, having a false trail at the bottom of the steps"
3. Elvis - "Only 1 False Trail, it is only just worth a 3.0"

The GM cogitated about the score for a very brief period and then spoke. "I enjoyed the arrows, which at times were few and far between. The run was worthy of an 8, but due to taking some old blokes down the steps , I am going to take 1 off, to give it a 7.0"

Prick Of The Week:

The GM decided not to award the Phalanx this evening.
